Cruise & Solve Crimes with Goofy

03 April 2011

You know it – Disney is as cutting edge as ever, not just with its animated films but also with its cruise ships. Disney Cruise Line's Disney Fantasy, which sets sail in early 2012, will feature new state of the art interactive gaming activities that are sure to make the kiddies giggle.

Blending the technological innovations and highly immersive gaming experiences of Kinect for Xbox 360 and PlayStation Move, Walt Disney Imagineering has created Magic PlayFloor and the Midship Detective Agency game.

The Magic PlayFloor allows 32 players to team up and interact with a 15 by 15 grid of 28 HD gaming screens. Sixteen light pads on the floor's perimeter detect motion and location and trigger actions that enable interaction with dozens of imaginative gaming experiences.

Using facial recognition and motion sensor technology, players of the Midship Detective Agency interact with 22 'enchanted' paintings throughout the ship while solving 'cases'. Teaming up with Mickey, Donald and Goofy, in one case, participants will help track down stolen art.
