From Sea to Machu Picchu

13 March 2011

A llama gnaws on the grass at your side as the morning mist slowly unveils a jutting lush green promontory and the tiered mountain crest ruins of Machu Picchu – the home of an ancient Incan civilisation. You are 2,430 meters above sea level, but you're here on an ocean cruise.

SeaDream Yacht Club has recently announced three pre-voyage and three post-voyage land adventure options for passengers travelling on 112-passenger SeaDream II between Barbados and Iquitos in March 2012.

The excursions through Lima, Cusco and Machu Picchu are all escorted by local licensed guides and, according to SeaDream Yacht Club, provide authentic cultural experiences designed for the sophisticated traveler.

Tours include accommodation in five-star hotels, a majestic train journey and quality dining experiences. Those who elect longer tour options will stay overnight at the Machu Picchu Sanctuary Lodge Hotel, giving them early morning and late evening access to the site – for which the rewards are mountain mist and no crowds.
