P&O expands European itineraries

09 April 2011

P&O Cruises' recently announced 2012/13 European program is offering you even more options to explore the beauty and history of the European continent.

Seven of P&O Cruises' ships will sail 153 cruises to 250 destinations over the course of the season. And 13 new ports, including Brindisi and Ancona on Italy's eastern coast, Durres in Albania and Kalmar in Sweden, will be a highlight.

Lovers of childfree tranquility and Northern Europe's glaciated topography should take note of the program offered by Oriana (she'll be freshly refurbished and completely childfree by this time) – a 14-night journey through Iceland and Norway in particular.

Meanwhile, lovers of warm weather and ancient history will prefer the 710-passenger Adonia, which is also offering a full season of "exclusively for adults" Mediterranean cruises with visits to Egypt, Israel, Greece and Italy, says the line.

Families should consider the cruise offerings of Oceana, including exploration of popular destinations in the Western Mediterranean and magical journeys through Norwegian Fjords.
