Wi-fi Cruising

03rd January 2011

Are you wedded to your laptop and totally dependent on the internet? If so, you'll be happy to know that another frontier has been conquered for you.

Uniworld Boutique River Cruises recently announced that in the New Year guests on all its company-owned ships will have access to complimentary wi-fi access.

Better still, for those who have managed to leave laptops at home (or, heaven forbid, don't have one), computer stations with internet access will also be available on board free of charge.

"Being able to share your holiday experiences with family and friends back home is an important aspect of travel," said Uniworld's general manager, John Molinaro. "We want to make this process easier..."
